

Welcome to Ultra Marine

Greetings to you, UltraMarine reader!

I've got two great tank features for you to enjoy this issue. Mike Paletta is up first as he brings us an update on his developing 500 US gallon system. Next, we visit veteran UK reefer Pete Parry to see exactly what makes his stunning new SPS system tick. If you are anything like me you'll get plenty of ideas from these pieces to take away and transmogrify for your own particular purposes!

Beyond this, have a look at our close-look review of a really interesting and innovative new reactor from Nyos, and check out specialist husbandry pieces covering everything from feeding basics to trace element management with our usual suspects Keith and Ken. Finally kick back with some eye-candy as we take a look at some stunning new clam species with James Fatherree (he literally wrote the book!). To finish, we spice things up with a trip to the tropical paradise of Grenada for some natural inspiration and well-earned R&R with our guide, Chris Sergeant.

If there was ever an issue of UM that delivered on the 'Pure Inspiration for Marine Hobbyists' tag line... this is it!

12 Q&A

Blue Planet Aquarium Curator Dave Wolfenden answers your marine queries.

17 Close Look Review

We first noticed it way back at Interzoo... now it's time stop the 'torqing' and give it a whirl in a real world reef system. Ladies and Gentlemen, the Nyos Torq reactor.

22 Gone Without a Trace

Kenneth Wingerter grapples with the measurement and control of those enigmatic trace elements as we visit one of the final frontiers in reef-keeping.

28 Reef Icons - No.3

John Clipperton turns his lens onto another stunning, iconic species and this time it's the turn of the Mandarin Dragonet to show-off it's amazing technicolor dreamcoat.

34 A Journey through Reefing (pt 3)

Picking up where we left him back in October last year, we catch-up with US reefer Mike Paletta to see how his whopping new system is coming along.

42 Immaculate Conception

In this special extended feature, John Clipperton visits UK reefing veteran Pete Parry for an in-depth tour of his incredible new SPS dominated system.

54 Food For Thought

Keith Moyle serves up a mixed platter of information and advice to help ensure that your reef residents get the best diet possible. Wafer thin mints are not included.

62 Giant Clams: On Species and Hybrids

There's no one better to talk us through recent developments in the field of clam classification and identification than James Fatherree. So what new characters have come out of their shells recently?

74 Salt and Spice

Chris Sergeant samples Caribbean life both above and below the waves as he takes us on a journey through the varied habitats of the 'spice isle', Grenada.
