

Welcome to Ultra Marine

Greetings to you, UltraMarine reader!

Well, it's been a strange couple of months for me. I decided to strip down my Reefer 625 (the UM test tank). earlier in the year and I've now pretty much completed this. My office is consequently very quiet now and I have to say, my thoughts are already turning to something new! For now though I'm just running my smaller Aquarium Systems tank to tide me over. Look out for my update in the next issue.

Before that of course, we have this issue to enjoy and I hope that you find the content stimulating. This time around we've got everything from Mike Paletta cooking-up a variety of bubbling green concoctions, to Chris Sergeant coming face-to-face with some creepy critters in the Canaries. And of course check out the stunning reef of André Lavareda for your "cherry on the cake" of inspiration

Bon appétit!

John

10 Reef Icons - No. 15

It's not a fish for the faint-hearted nor passable as completely "reef-safe", but we still can't help hankering after a fish that is as handsome as it is "hard as nails". It's the Harlequin Tuskfish.

16 Close Look Review

In this issue, we break with tradition to visit an exciting new reef shop in the North West UK. Check out our review of Finest Aquatics Ltd, Widnes to see how we got on at this new outlet.

26 Mike's Home Brew

With a view to ensuring your corals "get their greens", veteran US hobbyist Mike Paletta relates his experiments, experiences and results in the home culture of various planktonic foods.

36 Pride of Caldas da Rainha

We get acquainted with the picture perfect aquarium of Portuguese reefer André Lavareda who has created a stunning, yet relatively simplistic 600 litre reef with a superstar centrepiece. Muito bem!

46 Read All About It!

Campbell Robertson reminds us that printed media still has a place in modern reefing (hear, hear!) and suggests a spread of titles that offer the reader a level of quality rarely matched on the web.

54 Reef Automation

Keith Moyle turns tech guru as we journey into the fast moving and rapidly growing market in handy hardware that, if used properly, can help take the stress and risk out of reefing.

70 In Search of Angels

Chris Sergeant goes on a crusade for the Holy Grail of Elasmobranchs, the Angelshark, and encounters a host of heavenly beauties on the way. But will his quest be all for nothing?
