

Welcome

to UltraMarine

Greetings to you, UltraMarine reader!

So, we come to the close of another year and I hope you don't mind if I "let loose" a little and inject a dose of light-hearted fun and irreverence into this now traditionally festive issue. More than ever, I think we could all use it at the moment!

Whether you are reading this issue in the lead up to Christmas, or afterwards (perhaps with the obligatory plate of turkey sandwiches at your side), I say take time to really appreciate not just your reef, but also the wider reefing community and the "positive" aspects both confer. I'm sure that, while pressures will doubtlessly see some say farewell, the strongest will survive and go on to shape the future!

Being a traditional time for togetherness I'd like to extend a warm invitation to such folk to join us on our Facebook page and perhaps consider contributing in other ways into the New Year. Whatever your plans are, we are always interested to hear them, even if it's just a quick email.

Now, before I succumb to my penchant for festive food metaphors, I'd like to say, from all the team, "Thank You" for your support. We hope you will stay with us into 2022 and beyond, so we can continue to be a part of your reef-keeping journey.

05 Marine News/Product News

10 Reef Icons - No. 16

In this instalment, we've got a real beauty for you... the Coral Beauty that is. It's a fish that you might have often seen but possibly overlooked, until now. We've locked focus and are moving in!

16 Close Look Review

In this issue, Keith Moyle enlightens us with a special look at the brand new LED light fixture from Reef Factory, the Reef Flare. So how will the Flare fare in a real reef setting?

24 Mike's Myth-Busting Guide

For Rookie Reefers: If there's anyone best placed to navigate a newbie through the pitfalls of setting up a reef, it's veteran US reefer Mike Paletta. So, sit back and soak in his perky shower of wisdom!

34 Reef Economics

With costs rising on what seems a daily basis Campbell Robertson rides to the rescue with a smorgasbord of tasty tidbits to streamline your operations for the good of your purse, and the planet!

42 A Reef for All Seasons

As another year draws to a close, John Clipperton gets all misty as he looks back at some of the fantastic featured tanks we've had in recent issues. But what made them special enough to make our Hall of Fame?

54 Ultimate Christmas Collection

Keith Moyle is clearly in festive spirits (or should that be ON festive spirits!) as he leads us on a merry dance mixing musical appreciation with Christmas gift inspiration! HO HO HO!

68 Sex on the Reef

As the lights go down on another Christmas inspired issue, Richard Aspinall brings more sauce with this no holds barred look at "fish nookie" and other naughty topics. Best Barry White voice engaged....
